

Reap the advantages of seeking help with finding work

Job seekers are seeing the benefits of having The Salvation Army Employment Plus service the Launceston area.

As one of the largest and most experienced employment service organisations in Australia, it is implementing a range of specialised programs in the region that are helping local job seekers secure meaningful, long-term work.

“As an organisation, the service has enormous experience in Northern Tasmania so we have a lot of skills and knowledge that we can pass on,” the organisation’s spokeswoman Kirrilee Trist said.

Despite recent changes to national employment services, the organisation will continue to service the Launceston and Burnie areas and has also opened a new site in Devonport.

“Our Launceston team has been working with the local employers and organisations — including The Salvation Army — for the last seven years,” Ms Trist said.

The organisation’s offices in Launceston, Burnie and Devonport offer a full range of assistance, with a variety of support, information and training options that can be tailored to any individual — whether they be a school leaver, recently retrenched, a mature-aged job seeker or someone who’s been unemployed long-term.

For more information about the employment opportunities and training programs available please call 136 123 to connect to your local office or visit www.employmentplus.com.au.
